

UNIT 6 CLUSTER 2 SELECTION SUMMARIES

A Long Way to Go: Minorities and the Media

Genre: Essay

Carlos Cortés examines the presence of minorities in the media. Negative stereotyping in the media sometimes leads the public to form inaccurate opinions. Although some progress has been made to counter stereotypes, there is still much to be done.

The Color Green

Genre: Editorial

The lack of minority representation in TV programs is often blamed on those in charge of the networks. Mark Punzalan argues that money drives programming and that blame is useless. He suggests that minorities work toward better programming instead.